Safety First!

Napoleon Bonaparte once said "There is no such thing as an accident – it is fate renamed."

We have a basic philosophy about safety around the farm: there's no such thing as an accident -- they result from bad judgement and poor decisions (not from fate)! We believe that almost every so-called "accident" can be prevented.

Case in point ... Lorraine suffered a broken ankle last week. She (and others) made a series of decisions that led to her fall. Was it an accident? We don't think so.

We've never addressed the uneven pavement in the barn. Someone left a wheelbarrow in the walkway. Several people walked around that wheelbarrow without moving it out of the way. We didn't wait for Lorraine's transition lenses to lighten from the sun before walking through the dark barn, virtually blind!

Could the broken ankle have been prevented? Absolutely. Was it an "accident"? Absolutely not.

Let's call accidents what they really are:
